SOULPEPPER'S 2019 SUMMER-FALL SEASON – CLASSICS RE-IMAGINED THROUGH NEW LENSES

Toronto, ON – February 20, 2019: Soulpepper Theatre Company today announced the Summer-Fall season, with new artistic programming from July to November 2019. The full line-up of the season, programmed under the leadership of former Acting Artistic Director Alan Dilworth, includes a collection of five exceptional plays about identity, friendship, love, and belonging, as well as two Soulpepper Concerts. The season welcomes three directors making their Soulpepper debuts. All programming and casting details can be found at Soulpepper.ca.

“What makes a classic? What is a modern classic? In our hyper-connected, hyper-speed moment how does a work from another time and place speak to us now? These are the questions our season is built on. Our concerts celebrate and re-invent classics. I feel that every play in our season is a modern classic. And in celebration of the multiplicity of truths explored in our modern classical offerings we have brought together a remarkable group of artists to breathe life into these extraordinary works,” said Alan Dilworth. “In my outgoing role as Soulpepper’s Acting Artistic Director, I am thrilled to welcome directors Philip Akin, Jani Lauzon, Andrea Donaldson in their Soulpepper debuts, and I welcome back the multi-talented, multi-disciplinary Frank Cox-O’Connell, and Soulpepper’s celebrated and beloved powerhouse Artistic Director Weyni Mengesha.”

“This season offers familiar stories that resonate with our times, but told through new lenses and by new voices. Welcoming artists into our company always opens up new opportunities for collaboration and creative growth, and I’m excited to see what we create together” said Weyni Mengesha, Artistic Director.

“Audiences look to Soulpepper for that perfect mix of classic plays, new works, and musicality, and this season is no different. Alan has brought together a rich programme of treats for everyone to enjoy, and we can’t wait to bring it to fruition,” said Emma Stenning, Executive Director.

Mainstage programming begins in July with Sam Shepard’s desert drama, Fool For Love, directed by Soulpepper Academy graduate Frank Cox-O’Connell, running alongside the brand new Soulpepper Concert The Promised Land: Steinbeck Through Song, created by Slight Family Director of Music Mike Ross and Sarah Wilson, joining the poetry of master songwriters and storytellers – Bruce Springsteen, Nina Simone, Sam Cooke, and Bob Dylan – to illuminate the search for the American dream.

“Fool For Love clearly speaks to our cultural moment, but what excited me most is how the play subverts its timeliness. Yes, we have this last cowboy standing at the edge of America trying to not take on the sins of the father, and we have his lover trying to forge a new way, free from the past and the cycles of dysfunction – which all feels very relevant. But their way through defies any clear meaning – it’s not aspirational, it’s not cautionary, it’s just... drama – sexy, funny, scary, smart, bloody drama. It’s about how we love, and how we change – it’s people performing open-heart surgery on themselves, during a high-speed chase,” said Frank Cox-O’Connell.

In August, Obsidian Theatre Company’s Artistic Director Philip Akin directs his first production at Soulpepper with the Tony Award-winning comedy Art by Yasmina Reza.

“For me the power of art is expressed uniquely inside each of us. Each new viewer sees something revelatory that ricochets in some fashion and we cannot help but respond. I am pleased to be directing Art for my Soulpepper debut,” said Philip Akin.

The unravelling of a seven-year affair follows with Harold Pinter’s Betrayal, marking Nightwood Theatre’s incoming Artistic Director Andrea Donaldson’s directorial debut at Soulpepper.

“Betrayal is psychological chess at its finest. It is ruthless, delicious, and intelligent. As a director, I can’t help but love works that demand extreme precision. And what a thrill to work on this play, with such an esteemed company of artists, for such a discerning audience. Betrayal is pure pleasure, the highest level of entertainment – a masterwork,” said Andrea Donaldson.

Beginning in September, Soulpepper Artistic Director Weyni Mengesha directs her first production since taking leadership of the company, with the ageless masterpiece A Streetcar Named Desire by Tennessee Williams – winner of the Pulitzer Prize for Drama.

Rounding out the Mainstage productions in the Summer–Fall season is the modern Canadian classic Almighty Voice and His Wife by Daniel David Moses. Jani Lauzon, who played the character White Girl in the original 1991 production, directs for the first time at Soulpepper in October.

“I had the great pleasure of acting in the World Premiere of Almighty Voice and His Wife and fell in love with the play then,” said Jani Lauzon. “A few years ago I realized that it was one of the shows I really want to direct. Daniel David Moses has written an extraordinary play – it’s a love story, it’s so beautiful, it’s got historical knowledge, and he’s rolled it into a very moving piece of theatre.”

Finally, in November, the sold-out hit Concert The Riverboat Coffee House: The Yorkville Scene, created and led by Frank Cox-O’Connell and Slight Family Director of Music Mike Ross, returns to the stage for a celebration of stories and songs that made a modest basement in Yorkville the hottest place to be.

The 2019 Summer–Fall season also includes the previously announced World Premieres of two partner presentations, Welcome To My Underworld from RARE Theatre Company in the fifth partnership between the two theatre companies and the signed music musical The Black Drum from the DEAF CULTURE CENTRE, supported by Soulpepper.

Soulpepper is pleased to offer American Sign Language (ASL) interpreted performances to Art on August 25 and 27, 2019 as well as the previously announced ASL performances of August: Osage County on June 6 and 8, 2019. ASL Interpreted performances are sponsored by TD Bank Group. After a tremendous first experience of offering Relaxed Performances for shows in the 2018–19 season, Soulpepper will be offering a relaxed performance of Betrayal on September 15, 2019. Relaxed performances are intended specifically to be sensitive and welcoming to all patrons who may benefit from a more relaxed theatre environment. For full details about the ASL and Relaxed Performances see soulpepper.ca/access.

Exclusive ticket access to the Summer–Fall programming is on sale to current subscribers as of 1:30 p.m. Public subscriptions sales begin on March 19. Single tickets go on sale April 30.

Soulpepper’s current Mainstage programming continues with: Little Menace: Pinter Plays by Harold Pinter, directed by Drummond-Dorrance International Fellow Thomas Moschopoulos; Wedding at Aulis by Sina Gilani, directed by Alan Dilworth; Copenhagen by Michael Frayn, directed by Katrina Darychuk; The Brothers Size by Tarell Alvin McCraney, directed by Mumbi Tindyebwa Otu; August: Osage County by Tracy Letts, directed by Jackie Maxwell; and a new concert from Mike Ross and Tom Allen, 88 KEYS.
